

Whistleblowing

Building the trust that supports growth

Whistleblowing – whereby an employee raises a concern about malpractice, wrongdoing, risk, or illegal proceedings – ought to be an important compliance matter for SMBs. When concerns are brought forth early, they can be investigated and addressed before they become a larger compliance issue. Yet our findings suggest it’s currently not viewed as the priority it should be.

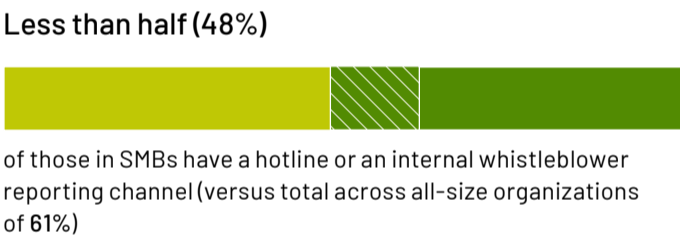

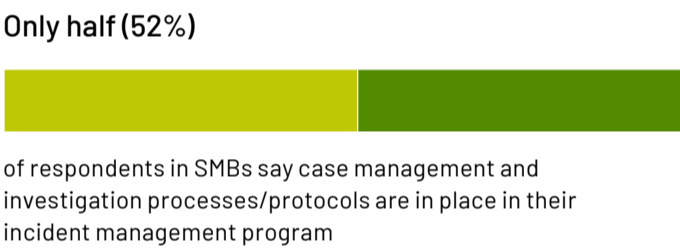

1

For SMBs, whistleblowing is not currently viewed as a major priority

Not enough SMBs are catching on to the need to upskill staff in this area

4

On the plus side, SMB employees are feeling increasingly confident in making a report
